Sustainable Path to Africa's Transformation"*

INTRODUCTION

"The Role of Standardisation in winning the fight Against Corruption for sustainable Africa's Transformation"

Corruption, Lawal 2007, is now recognized as a global phenomenon, which has to be addressed coherently and consistently and in recent years there have been significant increases in the attention paid to corruption, in part due to (1) series of high level corruption cases in industrialized countries and (2) due to an increasing awareness of the costs of corruption throughout the world and (3) due to the political and economic changes which many countries are undergoing.

The Policy Forum - Document on "Corruption and Development in Africa" GCA/PF/N.2/11/1997, goes into details and highlights the negative effects of corruption, viz: "Corrupt practices span a wide spectrum, ranging from petty corruption whereby bribes are required before normal bureaucratic procedures are accomplished, to large scale corruption whereby considerable sums of money are paid in return for preferential treatment or access. Corruption occurs in the political, economic and administrative spheres. Corruption is worse in countries where institutions, such as the legislature and the judiciary are weak, where rule of law and adherence to formal rules are not rigorously observed, where political patronage is standard practice, where the independence and professionalism of the public sector has been eroded and where civil society lacks the means to bring public pressure to bear. Once corruption becomes entrenched, its negative effects multiply. It induces cynicism, because people begin to regard it as the norm. It undermines social values because people find it easier and more lucrative to engage in corruption than to seek legitimate employment. It erodes governmental legitimacy because it hampers the effective delivery of public goods and services. It limits economic growth because it reduces the amount of public resources, discourages private investment and saving and impedes the efficient use of government revenue and development assistance funds".

Transparency International's (www.transparency.org) definition of corruption is: "the abuse of entrusted power for private gain". This can mean not only financial gain but also non-financial advantages.

Khan (1996) defines corruption as an act which deviates from the formal rules of conduct governing the actions of someone in a position of public authority because of private - regarding - motive such as wealth, power or status.

Onigu, 2000, further states that, "Corruption is the perversion of integrity or state of affairs through bribery, favour or moral depravity" ... It takes place when at least two parties have interacted to change the structure or processes of society or the behaviour of functionaries in order to produce dishonest, unfaithful or defiled situations" ... in other words - corruption is a systematic vice in an individual, society or a nation which reflects favouritism, nepotism, tribalism, sectionalism, undue enrichment, amassing of wealth, abuse of office, power, position and derivation of undue gains and benefits.

Ojaide Francis, 2000, adds more to the debate on Corruption and brings into perspective the issues of bribery, smuggling, fraud, illegal payments, money laundering, drug trafficking, falsification of documents and records, window dressing, false declaration, evasion, underpayment, deceit, forgery, concealment, aiding and abetting of any kind to the detriment of another person, community, society or nation.

Generally scholars (Oтите Onigu, 2000) agree that corruption transcends bribery but includes "treasury looting and also the deliberate bending of rules of the system to favour friends or hurt foes and that it is clearly the evidence of absence of accountability, law and order."

The corruption vice, Grace Kobusingye, 2016, comes along with costs as citizens are compelled to pay for services that should be free; state budgets are pillaged by corrupt politicians; public spending is distorted as decision-makers focus spending on activities likely to yield large bribes like major public works; foreign investment is blocked as businesses are reluctant to invest in uncertain environments and economies suffer. She points out that, not only costly in terms of money, it is also costly in terms of public trust and citizens' willingness to participate in their societies. Corruption often has links to organised crime and fosters, as well as thrives, in conflict and war. Indeed, high levels of corruption can increase the likelihood of a protracted conflict or a post-conflict society sliding back into war. Efforts to tackle climate change can also be undermined by corruption as bribes are paid to ignore environmental protection rules in the pursuit of quick profits.
